MILFORD, PA (PRWEB) JUNE 08, 2016

MilfordMD Cosmetic Dermatology Surgery & Laser Center is hosting its second HydraFacial MD special event because the first was such a big success. Back by popular demand, the next HydraFacial special event is Thursday, June 9, and Friday, June 10. The two-day event, which is open to the public, is an opportunity for people to sample the award-winning facial rejuvenation technology at the greatly reduced rate of $99, for a $175 value. Those who like it and purchase personalized HydraFacial MD treatment protocols can apply the $99 to the cost of the protocol—essentially, getting their first treatment free!

The treatment is making waves not just at MilfordMD. Marie Claire magazine named HydraFacial MD one of five “it” beauty industry innovations for 2015. Allure magazine called it “One fantastic facial.” Star magazine reported that actress and comedian Amy Poehler’s glow was thanks to HydraFacial MD. And Brides magazine reported on “The spa facial that will get your skin big-day beautiful,” suggesting HydraFacial is a “...crazy, quick combo pack treatment” that deep-cleans pores, extracts impurities and softens the skin, while gently sanding away sun damage. It does all that, according to Brides, without leaving tell-tale post-facial signs of blotchy, raw-looking skin.

Cosmetic surgeon and MilfordMD Medical Director, Dr. Richard Buckley, says HydraFacial MD appeals to women and men who are looking for an in-office, no-downtime treatment option that visibly improves the look of the skin’s surface by nourishing skin hydration and getting rid of dead skin cells. It also helps to keep skin healthy. In fact, a series of HydraFacial MD treatments has been shown to offer long-term skin rejuvenating results.

“Patients sit comfortably, while we use the technology on their facial skin. After which, they can go home or go on with their day feeling their facial skin is glowing and vibrant. The benefits multiply with additional treatments. A series of three or four treatments, for example, reduces fine lines, diminishes sun or age spots, reduces pore size and works to eliminate the skin’s oily texture,” Dr. Buckley says. “Patients can even see a reduction in some of the major facial lines, like the nasolabial folds, which go from the nose to the mouth, after a series of HydraFacial MD treatments.”

HydraFacial MD is popular for many reasons. Among them: The treatment can be done to address patients’ specific and individual skin concerns, according to Dr. Buckley. Like a magic wand, the technology’s patented Vortex-Fusion serum delivery system cleanses, exfoliates and pulls the skin’s impurities and dead skin cells in one pass. The handheld device’s tip then does a quick change to infuse the skin with vital nutrients, such as antioxidants, peptides and hyaluronic acid.

MilfordMD’s aesthetician is trained in HydraFacial MD use and design protocols aimed at nourishing skin for skin health, hydrating skin or getting rid of skin toxins. “The HydraFacial MD can be used alone as a treatment that patients repeat throughout the year to improve skin health and keep their faces looking vibrant, or it can be used to enhance the results of other facial procedures, including fillers and injectables. It can also help patients maintain the beautiful effects we can achieve with laser skin resurfacing or chemical peels,” Dr. Buckley says. “This two-day event is a way people can see for themselves how the HydraFacial works, at a substantially discounted price.”

The HydraFacial MD June 9 and 10 special event at MilfordMD runs during regular practice hours, but pre-paid reservations are required and appointments are limited.
