We all have a unique makeup of genetics, as well as different lifestyles and habits that contribute to the way we age, and when it comes to turning back the clock and cosmetic intervention, it's easy to assume what works for one person will work for you too. "There are so many misconceptions, as well as confusion about facelifts and injectables. Because people hear about injectables from a friend or a read about a celebrity getting it, they think that's what will solve serious aging issues, like jowls with marionette lines or a drooping forehead. But an injectable filler or neuromodulator is only one piece of the puzzle. It's more about the results that you want to achieve and what will give you the most transformative results. This may include surgeries, such as facelifts and browlifts along with lasers to improve the skin tone and texture, plus injectables to restore volume and relaxing muscles to minimize wrinkles. In a MilfordMD Panfacial Rejuvenation approach, we look at the whole picture, instead of just singling out parts," says Dr. Richard E. Buckley who is the medical director of MilfordMD Cosmetic Dermatology Surgery & Laser Center in Milford, Penn.

With a Panfacial Rejuvenation treatment at MilfordMD, patients are receiving the most highly customized comprehensive treatments they can get, giving them the best outcomes and more predictable results.

The PanFacial Rejuvenation technique by Dr. Richard E. Buckley at MilfordMD allows for a highly personalized treatment plan designed to address the entire face, rather than just parts of it.

“There are so many misconceptions about injectables.”

“At MilfordMD we value forming long term relationships and talking about the many options that will give you back the look that your face had 10 or 20 years ago. Surgery may be a first step, but after, it’s also looking at your skin and what you need to do, such as CO2 ablative laser treatment and injectables. Because every face and patient are different, it’s crucial to take the time to talk and discuss reasonable goals and stage a treatment timeline,” says Dr. Buckley.

For patients seeking this truly tailored experience, finding a trained physician who understands the aging process is essential. “There are many practitioners who may have some tools, but not a full understanding of what to do to make the results truly transformative and so impressive that they speak for themselves, much like masterpieces of art. There are so many nuances with every patient that will make each plan different, and if surgery is part of it, it’s usually before the non-surgical interventions. For instance, if you have hyperactive muscles in the forehead, we administer a neuromodulator injectable after surgery for better results in placement and a better effect. When we begin to make dramatic improvements on one area of the face or body, we also take into consideration other parts of the body. For example, if your face looks younger, shouldn’t the neck, chest and hands look younger too?” says Dr. Buckley.

Customizing your treatment plan also allows you to work on a reasonable timeline that doesn’t interfere with your lifestyle. “So many people assume that a facelift surgery has a long downtime and that panfacial means that everything is done at once. But it shouldn’t be that way nor is it respectful to the body and its healing needs. We work with our patients so that they can go back to their life with minimal time off and make plans for the next steps, such as what happens with other nonsurgical procedures afterward. A Panfacial Rejuvenation approach at MilfordMD is really a very tailor-made process, and patients are becoming more attracted to this type of intervention because it ensures you’re getting everything that’s needed to get the best, most youthful results,” says Dr. Buckley.
