Many women struggle with vaginal dryness, urinary leakage, and a loss of sexual sensation. These issues can destroy self-confidence and stand in the way of a normal sex life. ThermiVa can help eliminate these problems. Dr. Marina Buckley explains how the procedure is great for women of all ages who want to regain their sexuality.

MILFORD, PA. (PRWEB) JULY 15, 2019

Recently, the Cleveland Clinic reported on the fact that many women over the age of 50 find sex a chore due to vaginal dryness and other medical issues. After menopause, there are a lot of barriers to sex, according to the publication. However, these issues do not have to mean the end of sex. It is possible for women to have great sex well into their 80s.

One of the main issues that gets in the way of great sex after the age of 50 is urinary incontinence. A revolutionary and non-surgical new treatment called ThermiVa can help eliminate this problem. One of the main indications for ThermiVa is incontinence, according to Dr. Marina Buckley, President of Pocono Medical Care, Inc. Dr. Buckley says, "ThermiVa is a revolutionary technology as far as incontinence goes." It can help any woman struggling with incontinence.

In addition to urinary incontinence, ThermiVa can help address many of the issues that stand in the way of a great sex life, such as vaginal dryness, painful intercourse, and a lack of body confidence. According to Dr. Buckley, "ThermiVa can help improve moisturization, orgasmic sensations, and vaginal dryness."

Some of the main issues that gets in the way of great sex is urinary incontinence, lack of lubrication and aesthetic appearance. All of which can be treated without surgery and downtime with ThermiVa.

“ThermiVa can do wonders for women of all ages – not just those

ThermiVa can do wonders for women of all ages – not just those going through menopause. Dr. Buckley says that she has plenty of younger patients who come to her for ThermiVa. The procedure "has helped patients of all ages reach orgasm faster and easier without vaginal tightening." According to Dr. Buckley, urinary incontinence, vaginal dryness, and a lack of sensation can occur at any age. "These are issues that are really common among women post-childbirth," says Dr. Buckley. ThermiVa helps address these problems and restores sexual functioning at any age.

ThermiVa can also help with another major issue that impacts many women's sex life and that is body confidence. Prevention talks about how the body changes that women experience during menopause can lead to a lack of confidence. It's not only women who are going through menopause, but women of all ages, who struggle with confidence issues. Things like weight gain and childbirth can really shatter self-esteem. ThermiVa can also help improve the appearance of the vagina, which can enhance a woman's self-esteem. This procedure can help women of all ages feel sexy again and have great sex.

So, how does ThermiVa work? This procedure is a non-surgical vaginal rejuvenation treatment. It involves the use of a temperature-controlled radiofrequency device that mildly stimulates targeted vaginal tissues. This vaginal treatment enhances the body's natural healing ability and restores function. ThermiVa also helps tone loose tissue, which results in a long-term improvement of the appearance of the labia and the surrounding tissue.

ThermiVa treatments are comfortable and quick. They do not require any downtime. The appointment itself usually lasts less than 30 minutes. The best candidates for ThermiVa are women who are in good health and who want to reduce issues like urinary leakage, vaginal dryness, and loss of sensation. The treatment is also ideal for anyone who wants to enhance their confidence by improving the appearance of their vagina.
